November 19, 2021 2:52 PM from Ashley Meehan to everyone: Good question, @Beth. Currently, the definition of being fully vaccinated is still 2 weeks after final dose of primary series (1 dose J&J, 2 doses Pfizer & Moderna). At this time, I don't have information if that definition will change. If it does, I'm sure guidance will be forthcoming for how that impacts workplaces and other places (restaurants, bars, etc.) that are requiring proof of full vaccination. Sorry I don't have a more definite answer at this time :)

November 19, 2021 2:54 PM from Beth Sharber to everyone: @Ashley, we will look for future guidance. Thank you!

November 19, 2021 3:33 PM from Brian Roccapiore (he/him) to everyone: @Catherine - some states have a portal where you can look up yourself based on your personal information (name / DOB), but that will vary by state. You can also connect with your local state immunization registry to start that conversation locally.

November 19, 2021 3:36 PM from Catherine Huang to everyone: We work with our statewide database immunization database. I just want to point out how important that is. We've had situations that when incentives are available, some have tried to get repeated vaccinations that weren't needed.

November 19, 2021 3:40 PM from Katie Zimmerman to everyone: Are there any recommendations for asking vaccination status during the hiring process under the new vaccination rules?
