Subject: Implementing the New Freedom Initiative and Involving Persons with Disabilities in the Preparation of the Consolidated Plan through Citizen Participation

I. Purpose

The purpose of this notice is to reissue CPD Notice 05-03 to make it clear that Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), HOME, and Housing Opportunities for Persons With Aids (HOPWA) funds can be used to respond to the challenges raised by Olmstead v. L.C., the New Freedom Initiative, and Executive Order 13217. The changes in this reissued notice include the provision of a specific section on other publications that can be used for guidance as well as specific information on the use of HOME, and HOPWA funds for this initiative. This notice provides direction concerning the manner in which jurisdictions may incorporate the objectives of the New Freedom Initiative in identifying the needs of persons with disabilities and targeting CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA resources to meet those needs during the development of the jurisdictions’ consolidated plans. It also provides guidance on how to involve persons with disabilities and organizations representing persons with disabilities in the citizen participation process for the consolidated plan.

II. Background

The Olmstead Decision refers to the June 1999 Supreme Court ruling in Olmstead v. L.C., 527 U.S. 581 (1999), where the Court found that, under certain circumstances, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires states to provide community-based treatment for persons with disabilities. The decision provided that Title II of the ADA requires states to place, whenever possible, qualified individuals with mental disabilities in community settings rather than in institutions. Further, states were encouraged to develop “comprehensive, effective working plans” aimed at providing services to individuals with disabilities in the most integrated settings possible. Executive Order 13217 and the New Freedom Initiative, both briefly described below, also promote community-based initiatives for individuals with disabilities.

New Freedom Initiative - President George W. Bush announced the New Freedom Initiative on February 1, 2001, as a means to promote full access to community life via the implementation of the Olmstead Decision. This initiative is part of the Administration’s efforts to remove the barriers to community living that are present in the lives of persons with disabilities. It proposes six broad objectives:

1. increase access to assistive and universally designed technologies;
2. expand educational opportunities;
3. promote homeownership;
4. integrate Americans with disabilities into the workforce;
5. expand transportation options; and
6. promote full access to community life.

Executive Order 13217, Community-Based Alternatives for Individuals with Disabilities - This Executive Order, signed by President Bush on June 18, 2001, directs federal agencies to work with states to ensure compliance with the Olmstead Decision and the ADA. The executive order has a wider scope than the Olmstead Decision by targeting all persons with disabilities, rather than only those with mental disabilities. In addition, the Executive Order directed the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Justice, Department of Education, the Department of Labor, and the Social Security Administration to “evaluate the policies, programs, statutes and regulations of their respective agencies to determine whether any should be revised or modified to improve the availability of community-based services for qualified individuals with disabilities.” The collaborative efforts are designed to ensure that HUD and the other designated agencies work together to integrate persons with disabilities into local communities.

In response to Executive Order 13217, the Office of Community Planning and Development (CPD) conducted an evaluation of the CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA programs, which included a review of the relevant policies, statutes, and regulations, to determine how best to improve the availability of services for persons with disabilities. It was determined that current CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA statutes and regulations provide jurisdictions with sufficient latitude to implement a wide variety of activities directed toward improved community facilities and services, housing, neighborhood revitalization, and economic development. However, it was noted that outreach efforts could be expanded to ensure that persons with disabilities are aware of the support that may be available to them through CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA-assisted programs in the jurisdictions in which they reside.
III. Incorporating the New Freedom Initiative Goals into the Development of Grantees’ Consolidated Plans

The six goals of the New Freedom Initiative are consistent with the primary objectives of the CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA programs. The purpose of the CDBG program is to develop viable urban communities by providing decent housing and a suitable living environment and to expand economic opportunities, principally for low- and moderate-income persons. The purpose of the HOME program is to expand the supply of affordable housing for low-income households. The purpose of the HOPWA program is to provide states and local governments with resources to meet the housing needs of low-income persons living with HIV/AIDS and their families. Many activities designed to meet one or more of the six goals of the New Freedom Initiative may be assisted under the CDBG HOME and HOPWA programs, provided each assisted activity meets the applicable CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA program requirements and addresses a need that is identified in the jurisdiction’s consolidated plan.

The consolidated plan regulations at 24 CFR 91 require that grantees consider the needs of persons with disabilities when preparing their consolidated plans. In order for grantees to be as responsive as possible to the needs of persons with disabilities, each jurisdiction must first identify its population of persons with disabilities. To that end, data obtained from the U.S. Census is readily available on the HUD Community Planning and Development website which provides disability data that is broken down by gender and age, and by race and ethnicity. The website contains information for each state broken down by block group. In addition, the block group records are coded with the name and code numbers of the state, county, place, county subdivision, and metropolitan area. The Census data and instructions for using this information are found on the websites listed below:

Data by Gender and Age: http://www.hud.gov/offices/cpd/systems/census/cdbgdisabled/index.cfm

During the preparation of consolidated plans, the regulations require jurisdictions to consult with public and private organizations that provide housing assistance, health services, and social services (24 CFR 91.100 and 91.110). Many of these organizations serve persons with disabilities, such as independent living centers (ILCs). ILCs are community-based organizations providing services and advocacy for persons with disabilities. Grantees might find it advantageous to collaborate with these organizations, not only to ensure that they are aware of the availability of CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA assistance in their respective jurisdictions, but also to help jurisdictions identify the social service, housing, and other needs of persons with disabilities.

Each jurisdiction must follow its citizen participation plan which sets forth the jurisdiction’s policies and procedures for citizen participation (24 CFR 91.105(a) and 91.115(a)). The citizen participation plan must provide for and encourage citizens to participate in the development of the consolidated plan and annual action plan, any substantial amendments to the plan, and the annual performance report. As such, jurisdictions should take actions to encourage persons with disabilities to participate in the consolidated planning process. The citizen participation plan must require public hearings regarding the plan and performance report at times and locations convenient to the public, with accommodation for persons with disabilities. It should also describe how accommodations would be made. In addition, the citizen participation plan, consolidated plan, annual action plan, and performance report must be made available in alternative formats accessible to persons with disabilities, upon request. The citizen participation plan, consolidated plan, annual action plan, and performance report must also include information, including contact information, to advise persons with disabilities how to request an accommodation, including how to request documents in an alternate format.

HUD recommends that CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA recipient jurisdictions identify the ILCs that service their local areas, and work in collaboration with these ILCs. In their goal to assist persons with disabilities to achieve their maximum potential within their families and communities, ILCs work to ensure access to housing, employment, transportation, communities, recreational facilities, and health services. Working together with the ILCs will assist the CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA recipient jurisdictions in implementing the goals of the New Freedom Initiative and involving persons with disabilities in the consolidated plan process through citizen participation. A directory of ILCs can be found at: www.ilru.org/html/publications/directory/index.html.

Examples of CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA Assisted Activities Designed to Address the Needs of Persons with Disabilities

As previously stated, the New Freedom Initiative objectives are in harmony with the primary objectives of the CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA programs. Jurisdictions may use their CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA funds to assist activities that address one or more of the six objectives of the New Freedom Initiative, provided each assisted activity meets the applicable CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA program requirements and addresses a need that is identified in the jurisdiction’s consolidated plan.

Because CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA-assisted activities are initiated and developed at the local level, communities are able to shape their respective CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA programs. The activities initiated are based upon a jurisdiction’s perceptions of its local needs, priorities, and benefits to the community and its residents, which also helps meet the needs of persons with disabilities and removes barriers to community living.

Following are some examples of the types of CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA-assisted activities that CDBG grantees, HOME Participating Jurisdictions (PJs), and HOPWA grantees can undertake to enable persons with disabilities to obtain full access to community life, rather than living in institutional settings. This is not an inclusive list, as communities may find other innovative ways to use their CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA funds to benefit persons with disabilities. Communities should contact their local HUD Office of Community Planning and Development for guidance and website, if they have questions about the eligibility of a proposed activity.

CDBG Activities

CDBG funds can be used to provide for eligible activities that promote the ability of persons with disabilities to live in home and community-based settings. Such activities must meet one of the three CDBG National Objectives. Some examples of how the CDBG program can address the needs of persons with disabilities are:

- Assistance to support homeownership for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to promote homeownership and promote full access to community life);

- Public services to expand transportation options for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to expand transportation options and promote full access to community life);

- Rehabilitation of housing units to increase accessibility for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objective to promote full access to community life);
- Rehabilitation of a building to be used as a center for training persons with disabilities to enable them to live independently (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to integrate Americans with disabilities into the workforce and promote full access to community life);

- Training persons with disabilities to enable them to qualify independently for jobs created by CDBG-assisted special economic development activities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to integrate Americans with disabilities into the workforce and promote full access to community life);

- Removal of material and architectural barriers that restrict the mobility and accessibility of persons with disabilities to public facilities and improvements (addresses New Freedom Initiative objective to promote full access to community life);

- Public services concerned with education, job training, fair housing and activities of daily living\(^1\), and access to adaptive equipment to assist persons with disabilities with accessing computers (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to integrate Americans with disabilities into the workforce, expand educational opportunities, increase access to assistive and universally designed technologies, and promote full access to community life);

- Assistance to make Housing Choice Voucher rental and homeownership units accessible to persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to promote full access to community life and promote homeownership);

- Consultation with public housing agencies (PHAs) concerning the needs of persons with disabilities and providing funds to PHAs to make units accessible in compliance with the Fair Housing Act, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the ADA (addresses New Freedom Initiative objective to promote full access to community life); and,

- Construction of job training facilities for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to integrate Americans with disabilities into the workforce and promote full access to community life).

\(^1\) Activities of daily living (ADL) refer to those skills needed in typical daily self care. Such activities can include bathing, dressing, grooming, feeding oneself, toileting, and taking medication.
HOME Activities

HOME funds can be used to develop housing units or provide tenant-based rental assistance that promotes the ability of persons with disabilities to live in home and community-based settings. All HOME assisted housing activities must benefit low-income families and meet the HOME long-term affordability requirements. Some examples of how the HOME program can address the housing needs of persons with disabilities are:

- Assistance to develop accessible homeownership housing units for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objectives to promote homeownership and promote full access to community life);

- Assistance to develop accessible rental housing units for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objective to promote full access to community life);

- Rehabilitation of existing housing units to increase accessibility for persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objective to promote full access to community life); and,

- Tenant-based rental assistance targeted to persons with disabilities (addresses New Freedom Initiative objective to promote full access to community life).

HOPWA Activities

HOPWA funds can be used for supportive services and housing assistance that promote the availability of community-based services and housing for eligible low-income persons with HIV/AIDS and the persons of such families. All HOPWA-assisted activities must benefit low-income persons with HIV/AIDS and comply with program criteria. Examples of how HOPWA funds can address the needs of persons living with HIV/AIDS include:

- Housing information support, to locate available accessible housing and permanent housing placement support, to secure such housing.

- Resource identification activities, to establish, coordinate and develop housing assistance resources, including efforts to increase accessibility for eligible persons;

- Housing assistance to low-income persons living with HIV/AIDS and their families in the form of tenant-based rental assistance, and short-term rent, mortgage and utility assistance; and
- Assistance to develop accessible supportive housing facilities, community residences, and single room occupancy dwellings through the use of funds for acquisition, rehabilitation, conversion, lease, new construction, and repair of housing facilities.

V. Guidance

HUD has issued two notices and a Model Guide that may be beneficial in helping jurisdictions develop CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA-assisted activities designed to meet the needs of persons with disabilities. These guidance pieces are described in the paragraphs that follow.

In 2000, HUD issued CPD Notice 00-10 (which has expired, but may be used as a reference), Accessibility for Persons with Disabilities to Non-Housing Programs Funded by CDBG Funds – Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the ADA and the Architectural Barriers Act. Grantees are encouraged to refer to this notice for key compliance elements for non-housing programs and facilities assisted by the CDBG program (e.g., public facilities and improvements, commercial buildings, office buildings, and other non-residential buildings). CPD Notice 03-12 (which has expired, but may be used as a reference) extended the provisions of this Notice.

HUD also issued CPD Notice 00-09 (which has expired but may be used as a reference), Accessibility Notice: Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Fair Housing Act and their applicability to housing programs funded by the HOME Investment Partnerships Program and Community Development Block Grant Program. Grantees are encouraged to refer to this notice for key compliance requirements for new construction and rehabilitated housing activities assisted by the CDBG, HOME, and HOPWA programs. CPD Notice 03-13 (which has expired, but may be used as a reference) extended the provisions of this Notice.

In 2005, HUD issued a Model Guide, HUD-2005-10-CPD, Fair Housing for HOME Participants. This guide is a series of five publications: Understanding the Basics, Promoting Fair and Accessible Housing Opportunities in HOME Projects, Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing, Administering Tenant-Based Rental Assistance, and Creating Economic Opportunity. This series reviews the applicable Federal fair housing requirements, including accessibility requirements, illustrates best practices in promoting fair housing, and highlights PJ responsibilities for ensuring compliance with fair housing requirements. Although the publications are aimed at PJ’s, CDBG recipients may wish to refer to the publications for guidance on meeting their Fair Housing responsibilities.

These publications are available by calling Community Connections, HUD’s information service, at 1-800-998-9999. The CPD notices are also available on-line through HUD Clips at www.hud.gov/offices/adm/hudclips.
VI. Summary

The New Freedom Initiative seeks to remove the barriers to community living that are present in the lives of persons with disabilities by focusing on several broad objectives: promoting full access to community life; increasing access to assistive and universally designed technologies; expanding educational opportunities; integrating Americans with disabilities in the workforce; promoting homeownership; and expanding transportation options. These objectives are consistent with the primary objectives of the CDBG, HOPWA and HOME programs. Many activities designed to meet one or more of the New Freedom Initiative objectives may be assisted with CDBG, HOPWA or HOME funds, provided the assisted activity meets the applicable program requirements. As jurisdictions develop their consolidated plans, it is critical that CDBG and HOPWA grantees, and HOME PJs work and partner with local disability advocacy groups, ILCs, and persons with disabilities to identify the needs of persons with disabilities and to determine how best to address the identified needs. Only through the involvement of persons with disabilities and organizations representing persons with disabilities will HUD and its partners be able to actively pursue the six objectives of the New Freedom Initiative.

If grantees have any questions about the guidance provided in this memorandum, they should contact their HUD field office. HUD field staff should call the Office of Block Grant Assistance at (202) 708-3587 for questions regarding the CDBG program, the Office of Affordable Housing at (202) 708-2470 for questions regarding the HOME program, and the Office of HIV/AIDS Housing at (202) 708-1934 or email HOPWA@hud.gov for questions regarding the HOPWA program.
